a) Description of the activities and information about the expected contribution and value added the nominated BoS member (candidates organization) will bring to the BoS²

SPECTARIS promotes the interests of the photonics industry and academia across a range of communication channels and is an active liaison body to government agencies, industry, research and the media. The association's market reports and industry data create a tangible basis for business decisions.

SPECTARIS with some 430 corporate members supports the photonics community at international trade fairs and business trips. Country-specific seminars provide key information on entering promising international markets.

The association actively supports companies of the photonics industry in attracting national and European funding, such as from the EU framework program Horizon Europe.

SPECTARIS promotes Photonics as the key technology of the century inside and outside of the industry by giving presentations and writing popular books like "Photonics infographics".

In the BoS, SPECTARIS is going to be an active member of the European photonics community by establishing links between partners from industry and academia and by making the impact and benefits of the photonics industry visible to European and national politics, using the wide professional network of the association.

SPECTARIS brings the voice of many SMEs to Photonics21. Those smaller companies often don't have the manpower to send representatives to the meetings, but in total their contribution to the European photonics industry is significant and innovative.

SPECTARIS is running several initiatives in the areas sustainability, health and future mobility, which help to match photonics research topics with the agenda of the European Union.

SPECTARIS has actively supported the reposition of Photonics21 on the PPP candidate list of the European commission. Activities included meetings in person with executives of the European Commission and the German Federal Ministry of Research and Education to the decision (yes, this was possible before March 2020 ☺), several letters to the decision makers and support of the position paper of EPIC contributing numerous signatures of CEOs of German photonics companies and more.
